

P. 12 contains a statement by the interpreter: "LORENÇO DEL AGUILA juez del p[uebl]o de tepuztlán declara por lengua de JU FREYLE ynterprete q[ue] en el p[uebl]o de tepuztlán ay dos myll y quatro cientos y treinta y ocho tributarios casados y tasados y moços y moças para casar [?] biudos y biudas quattro myll y ciento y treinta y cinco personas y tres myll y setecientos y treinta y cinco muchachos lo qual bio por listas o por cuento el el d[ic]ho pu[ebl]o de tepuztlán que sujetos con los yndios del senorio y rrenteros y en el d[ic]ho pueblo de particulares, lo qual firmo el juez al pie de las pinturas del d[ic]ho interprete:

JOANO FREYLE

The hieroglyphs are of course the key to the document, both because of their innate interest, and because the population data is meaningless without them. Present towns in the neighborhood of Tlalnepantla include San Jose, San Agustin, San Nicolas, Buenavista, Santo Domingo, San Carlos, San Martin, San Miguel, San Miguel Ahuatlan, San Sebastian and Santa Catarina Tlayca, all in the district of Yauhetepec. The nahuatl names of these and other towns may correspond to the glyphs, for example, Santo Domingo is called Atenco, which is in Glyph 2; Glyph 6 may be San Pedro Tlahuitzpa; Glyph 7 may be La Magdalena Amatlan, and Glyph 8 Santiago Tepetlapa.—[JOHN CORNYN.⁴]

⁴ Materials for working these glyphs might be uncovered in the 18th Century Relación of Tlalnepantla Quauhtenco (Cited in Tlalocan I:68) and the 16th Century ones from Totolapan and Tepoztlán (Published in PNE 6: 6-11 and 6: 237-250, inclusive).—(Editor)

[N32 II: 2] THE TECHIALOYAN CODICES: CODEX K (CODEX OF SANTA MARIA CALACOHUAYAN)

Notice of this codex was first given in *La Voz Guadalupana*¹ together with a reproduction of the upper part of folio 3v, in which appears the figure of the Virgin—possibly the Virgin of Guadalupe.

The Codex consists of three tall leaves of native paper, painted on both sides in the pastel shades common to the Techialoyan codices. The order of the leaves may be due only to the judgment of the 19th Century binder.

From the frequent mention made of Santa María Calacohuayan, the codex may be assumed to come from a town of that name existing not far west of Tlalnepantla (Mexico State). Other place names in the codex—Calpan, Xochitlan, Mazatlan, Cuauhtzoyac and Ayoteppec seem to be parajes in and about the pueblo, while the barrios of Calacohuayan are apparently Atla—itec, Tlacomulco, Atenco and Capoltitlan according to f. 3v (cited above). Saints MARIA, MIGUEL and [LU]CIA are mentioned, as well as the principales D. BERNARDINO and D. GUILLERMO CHIMAL-POPOCA, D. FELIPE DE SANTA MARIA, and D. AGUSTIN TEÇOCOMOCTZIN.

¹ Septiembre de 1944, Año XI, Núm. 5:2.

This codex was purchased in Mexico by the late ADOLPH SUTRO, a San Francisco magnate of variegated collecting tastes, whose voluminous purchases were stored in two warehouses in that city in 1906. One warehouse (full of medieval manuscripts) was burned; the other, with the codex, was spared. The contents of this second warehouse from the Sutro Library, are housed in the San Francisco Public Library building.²—[R.H.B. & B. McAFFEE]

² The Sutro Library has published catalogues of some of the Lizardi Independence pamphlets in its collection: the Commonwealth and Reformation materials, of enormous interest, remain mostly unexplored. TLALOCAN is indebted to Miss Helen Bruner, Librarian of the Sutro Library, for permission to publish the Codex of Santa María Calacohuayan.

[N33 II:2] MIXE TOPOONYMY.

Acatlan Grande—Kaibyomp

Alotepec—Naba^a?okp

Atitlan—Ni:b^a?aipy (ni 'agua'; ba?ám 'al lado de')

Ayacastepec, San Pedrito—Watykyech (waty 'enredado')

Ayutla, San Pablo—Tu^augyomp

Cacalotepec—Hoikyuahkp ('cerro del cacalote'; lit. 'cacalote su cerro'; hoiky, 'cacalote,' plus kyuahk, 'su cerro')

Camotlan, San Lucas—Munjai:py ('lugar del camote'; lit. 'camote su lugar'; muny 'camote' plus cham 'su lugar' from tyam 'aca')

Coatlan—Tsandyu^aam ('lugar del camino del serpiente'; tsa?añ 'culebra' plus tuy^au 'su camino' plus suffix ?am 'lugar de')

Cotzocon—Kutsago:mp (perhaps from kuuts 'cuando uno limpia ixtle')

Chimaltepec—Panguahky ('cerro del metate'; lit. 'metate su cerro'; pan 'metate' plus kuahk 'cerro')

Chisme, Sta. María—Yuikypy ('cuando uno mete alguna cosa entre o debajo de la tierra o ceniza, como elote debajo de la lumbre entre la ceniza')

Estancia de Guadalupe—Uiñipy (ui 'trampa,' lit. 'arroyo de la trampa')

Huitepec, Sta. Margarita—Mihkuahkp ('cerro grande'; mih 'grande' plus kuahk 'cerro')